The Model 500 was a revelation to me and the rest of the audio industry. Capable of brutish amounts of power (far more powerful sounding than the Japanese receivers, like the 2500 and 2600) and far, far better sounding than the horrible 510/M which succeeded it. A big, ballsy, but highly detailed amp, the Model 500 is a credit to it's designers.

Truly, the Marantz Model 500 is a "Holy Grail" vintage audio piece. This one was recently acquired from the original owner. It's lived in the same house since brand new, and as the pictures below indicate, its outer and inner boxes, all packing materials, stickers, and original service manual have been hibernating in his attic since the Nixon administration, and are included in the sale.

I welcome, from Croatian. sound lovers. In fact, I'm trying to find a scheme for Marantz SM 500 DC that I was suddenly out of service. True, it's pretty old, but I tried to revive him with regard to good understanding in electronics.

While the manual only indicates the 120 $\Omega$  as fusible resistors, due to the colouration of all the failed resistors they all appear to be fusible. I have no idea why so many resistors blew at once as the amp shows no tell tale signs of stress/overheating (bulging caps or darkened PCB areas) in the slightest.
